Adelsheim 2008 Willamette Valley
Pinot gris; $19

Wine Enthusiast

91 Adelsheim lays claim to being the third winery in the country to make Pinot Gris; this is their 25th vintage. It's a fine effort, beautifully rendered with crisp, spicy pear and melon fruit. Medium-bodied, focused and long. P.G. (4/1/2010)

Excellent This marks the 25th vintage for founder David Adelsheim, who allows winemaker Dave Paige to source vineyards for this release. They set the table with aromas of a fuzzy peach and apricot, tangerine, lemon juice and Citrus Peanut candy. On the attack, it's pleasantly zingy with more tangerine and lemon juice. The finish of lemon oil bodes well for ceviche, poached halibut or broasted chicken, and this should be available in half bottles at fine restaurants in the Portland area. (Spring 2010)
